ICOMOS Finland and the Governing Body of Suomenlinna invite those interested in the theoretical and practical issues of heritage and conservation to participate in the international seminar to be held in Suomenlinna on 8 – 9 June.

The seminar discusses how participation has been realised in places and sites, where time has created tangible and intangible heritage over several historic periods. Participatory processes, value assessments and the heritage itself are discussed in lectures and workshops in the 2-day seminar.

The maintenance of Suomenlinna offers a close example on how the spirit and identity of place can be identified when different cultures and times that the place has lived through, offer a variety of participants, views and values. The seminar is part of the joint ICOMOS Europe Group and International Scientific Committee on Shared Built Heritage meeting programs.
